

WHERE THE HOBO EXISTS.

SUNDAY NIGHT SCENES IN SOME OF THE NORTH END RESORTS.

Men Who Sleep on Floors and Drink the "Buzard" Whenever It Is Filled by the Bartender—Old Hat—the Row Gones.

"Fill up the buzard without collars and cuffs, Micky, and call up a hobo. I got me gaff in, told a hard luck story to an old guy and wifed him, he coughed up half a case."

It was in the North end, second ward, in a beer resort known as "The Buzard," No. 1, on Third street, near Grand avenue. Human wrecks were stranded there, as in other similar resorts in the near vicinity. Penitents and dissolute, half of them vagrants, who would not work if they could, they hung about the bar room waiting for some one to treat. They lazily shuffled up to the bar in response to a sign from "Micky," and to the "wifed" of "buzards," in buckets filled with beer, were placed upon the bar. The man who threw the half dollar down upon the bar with a ringing slap of the hand meant for the bartender to fill up the buckets without foam, and his jargon about the "guy" who

HUSTLE A TIME

and Get Cleared.

With a little excuse for the lodgers at the Helping Hand to go unkempt. Most of the men clustered there are unfortunates who are only awaiting the opportunity to do better and would be prominent if classed with the dissolute men who lodge in the low saloons not far distant. But many of them will admit that it is mainly their lack of money which has reached their present condition.

The chapel is open to every one and even hobos gather in the rear near the stove. The place for them to form and try to face about in the right direction sometimes being forth a spark from a hardened character and then, if an inclination to do right is born, even the hobo is given a helping hand.

HASTY EXIT.

Mrs. Minnie Blackwood Suddenly Leaves a Motel to Avoid an Unpleasant Meeting With Creditors.

Mrs. Minnie Blackwood and Mrs. Freil, who run a boarding house at 142 Baltimore avenue, and whose troubles with a boarder, Mrs. Freil, have been reported in this paper, have dissolved partnership. The dissolution was informal, Mrs. Freil claiming that Mrs. Blackwood has completely disappeared without a trace. Mrs. Freil reported the matter to Humane Agent Sherlock yesterday.

Mrs. Freil said she did not know where Mrs. Blackwood had gone, but she said she had seen her at a Ninth street hotel. When Mrs. Blackwood appeared some of her creditors were there besides Mrs. Freil. Mrs. Blackwood was told to leave the hotel, and she was seen no more.

Yesterday morning an anonymous letter, containing abuse of Mrs. Freil, was delivered to Chief Spencer by a messenger who demanded a quarter. The messenger said the letter was given to him by a woman at the corner of Thirtieth and Central streets, who told him the chief of police would pay him upon receiving it.

STRUCK WITH A SLUNGSHOT.

Price Cooper Assaulted and Severely Injured by a Man Known as "Judge," Who Escaped Arrest.

Price Cooper and a man known to Cooper and the police only as "Judge" met on Third street, near Broadway, yesterday afternoon, and "Judge" accused Cooper of going to see a woman with whom "Judge" was intimate. Cooper denied the charge, and to answer the accusation he struck him in the face with a slungshot. Cooper started to turn away and as he did so "Judge" struck him on the back of the head with a slungshot that stretched him out. Cooper's forehead struck on the curb, and a fracture of the skull was the result.

"Judge" ran away and bystanders helped Cooper to his feet. The injured man walked to the Central police station, where Police Sergeant Sullivan, who was on duty, subsequently directed his removal to the city hospital. The injuries are considered serious.

Descriptions of the man known as "Judge" were sent to all the precinct police stations.

AN EXPERT THIEF.

After Being Arrested on Suspicion a Stolen Diamond Was Found in His Possession.

Henry Snyder, charged by the police with being a burglar and active street thief in Kansas City, was arrested Saturday by Police Officer Edwards in a pool room at Nineteenth and Cherry streets.

"Judge" ran away and bystanders helped Cooper to his feet. The injured man walked to the Central police station, where Police Sergeant Sullivan, who was on duty, subsequently directed his removal to the city hospital. The injuries are considered serious.

Descriptions of the man known as "Judge" were sent to all the precinct police stations.

CLERK ARRESTED.

He Is Charged With Stealing Money and Cigars From a Restaurant in Which He Was Employed.

Oscar Albright, clerk in J. H. Bauer's restaurant, on East Twenty-first street, was arrested yesterday on a charge of stealing $1 and a quantity of cigars from Bauer.

It is alleged that the theft was committed by Albright while he was on duty at the restaurant. When Albright was arrested $1 and a quantity of cigars and tobacco were found in his possession.

A GOOD WEEK.

"The week just closed has been a good week to me," said a man who is known to the police as "Buzard," No. 2, on Walnut street, near Third.

"Besides the valuable donation of $70 from the police fund, a larger number of small donations were received than during any previous week. Two box cars filled with hobos rolled out of the city for more congenial surroundings. We owe, all daily to the police. We have been in jail $123. By noon to-morrow we will owe no man anything."

MISOR MENTION.

The Humane Society meeting to-night will be held at 1014 and 1016 West Second street, near Third.

McGee street was raided by the police last night and fifteen frequenters were arrested. The police also arrested a man yesterday on a charge of stealing a dozen pairs of shoes from A. Albrecht, of No. 118 Union avenue.

George Justice was arrested yesterday on a charge of assaulting a man on Union street, who gave him a black eye. The man, known as "Old Onion," who grew angry when a policeman indicated that he scolded him.

Meetings conducted by T. M. Myers, evangelist, and conducted by George H. Connel, pastor of the Sixth and Prospect avenue Christian church Sunday morning and evening and Captain Braithwaite last night. The "hobos" were very much agitated by a sign put up at "Buzard, No. 2" which read:

Gents Must Not Sleep on the Pool Tables.

"There has been a great decrease in the number of hobos in Kansas City," said police Captain Braithwaite last night. "We have not half so many as we did last winter."

TEMPTATIONS OF JESUS.

WHY THE SAVIOR DID NOT COMPLY WITH SATAN'S REQUESTS.

Interesting Discourse by Rev. Samuel A. Lough, of Baker University—Sermon by Rev. Frank D. Altman, at the Children's Memorial Lutheran Church.

At the Grand Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Samuel A. Lough, of Baker university, at Baldwin, Kan., preached both morning and evening. His subject in the morning was "The Temptations of Jesus." Rev. Lough said, in part:

"In studying the temptations of Jesus we are to understand that He met the tempter on the same conditions that we meet him."

"The first temptation was: If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread."

"To understand the scope and power of temptations, as well as the meaning of them, we must have some idea of what was taking place in the mind of Jesus at this time. He doubtless realized that as never before that He was the Son of God, who had become incarnate for the salvation of men. During the course of His eventful life at Nazareth the consciousness of this peculiar relation to the Father and the work He was to do must have been growing upon Him. This conviction was made wonderfully complete and strongly verified at His baptism, when the Father had said: 'Thou art my beloved Son.'"

"As the Son of God, He must have had in mind the magnitude of His work and the time of its completion. He knew that such was the Jesus to whom the devil addressed the temptation. If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread. How much more is in this sneering 'If thou sayest thou art the Son of God.' If thou sayest thou art the Son of God, thou shalt have the power to do all things."

"Many Christian people have mistaken the end for which we live. They think it is to get rich and to give heaven. Providence is multiplying the openings faster than we are entering them. It is but a matter of time when the world will be a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"Many Christian people have mistaken the end for which we live. They think it is to get rich and to give heaven. Providence is multiplying the openings faster than we are entering them. It is but a matter of time when the world will be a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle, something can be done toward occupying the world."

"The progress of the gospel. There is probably not a nation that is not now for its introduction. By steam and by air, the ends of the earth are now nearer each other than were New York and Paris fifty years ago. The world is now a better place. No matter how poor the church or individual, how hard the struggle,